

Meet Duane L. Herrmann

Duane L. Herrmann, born in Topeka, is a fifth generation Kansan who was farming on a tractor by age 13. His continued connection to the land is reflected in his stories and poems. An internationally published, award-winning poet and historian, his work has been published in a dozen countries in several languages and his books can be found in Libraries in the US, Europe and the Middle East.

Duane is an educator who has been adjunct faculty for Allen College and university guest lecturer. His work has received the Robert Hayden Poetry Fellowship, the Ferguson Kansas History Book Award and included in the Kansas Poet's Trail, the Map of Kansas Literature and American Poets of the 1990s. He has seven full-length collections of poetry: Prairies of Possibilities, Ichnographical:173, Praise the King of Glory, Remnants of a Life, Gedichte aus Prairies of Possibilities, Family Plowing and other poems, and No Known Address. A collection of short stories, Institor Gleg, is in process. Much of his published work can be found on Amazon.com, Baha'i Library Online (.com) and Academia.edu. He's managed this, despite a traumatic childhood embellished with dyslexia, ADHD, the resulting PTSD, cyclothymia and an anxiety disorder.
